We anticipate having a significant involvement in the undertaking of collaborative initiatives, in particular, in the following substantive areas, where the potential for proximity to the freshwater law-specific focus of AIDA is the greatest:

- Natural resources management and dispute resolution (under Institutional issues), with specific regard to freshwater resources, both surface and underground; and
- Climate change, development agenda and international law (under Global new/emerging issues), with specific regard to international water law, i.e., the law governing trans-boundary freshwater resources.

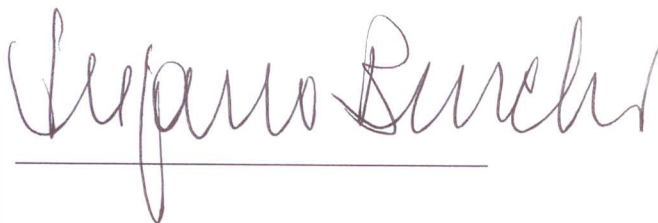

Another substantive area of possible interest is

- Regulatory frameworks for payment of environmental services, insofar as these benefit the flow/volumes and the quality of freshwater resources, whether surface or underground.

We have designated an Administrative Focal Point below with general responsibility for implementing the activities pursuant herewith:
